Today is Thursday, the second-to-last day of our hiking adventure. We spent the night in a tiny Italian town, the name of which I shamefully cannot, at this moment, recall. This morning, the heavens opened and covered the town in a steady drizzle. No one else wanted to hike but I convinced Mom to give it a try. We wore rain gear and covered that with ponchos. The rest of our party motored to Pienza, but we spooked out into the wet and sure enough, after 15 minutes the car stopped, and we enjoyed the rest of our hike in the sun. Miss you. Love
