

Dear Caroline,

NEW YORK

This nondescript postcard came from an Australian cafe a few blocks from my hotel. The area where we stayed was at the intersection of Chinatown and Little Italy, but there is apparently also a growing "Little Australia" since several Ozies have moved into the neighborhood. It's a fascinating cultural landscape, a patchwork composed of Asian groceries, pizza places, and a couple of trendy nightclubs. Last time I was in NYC, we stayed mostly uptown, so this feels more like the authentic New York experiences. It's definitely a foodie place, as well as the city of a million fire escapes. Every other block seems photogenic.

Happy New Year & best wishes for the upcoming semester!
