

Dear Caroline,

This card was sent to me by a greeting card company — some kind of promo post meant to entice merchandise buyers into ordering more, more, more! Anyway, I thought it was groovy in a retro-summer way and decided it might look mighty fine on your bedroom door. It is 10:50 AM on a Sunday — you're probably still asleep. I am sitting in a Starbucks near the Christopher Street subway stop, close to NYU. I have plans to meet Jessica in about thirty minutes — we're going to see Richard Linklater's new film, Boyhood, at the IFC Center. The film was made over twelve years with the same actors in order to truly capture the maturation/growth/evolution of one boy. Can't help but wish it had been 'Girlhood' so that I could compare my experience to another's interpretation. Have you heard about my travel plans? I'm trying to get everything together. New York is great but I'm ready to leave for a while. Maybe I'll return. Who knows.
Love, Brenna
